Todd is sharing his battle scars from football practice and Jo is spending her Sunday morning watching boring old commercials on TV. I must admit, I looked over at them a time or two, but couldn't help but roll my eyes at the small joys of family life, even if it's only for an hour or two. Fast forward a little bit later in the morning, Todd and Jo are still playing and chatting away. Well Jo starts to speak up, she says that she had to go to the bathroom and asks her brother to come with her. Then she goes, "Are you going to come with me to the bathroom?" and says the longest syllable, "aw-www-kward." She said it soooooo fast, it almost sounded normal. When she finished and Todd didn't immediately respond, she said "Awkward." Her voice in her head, "I just said 'awkward,' didn't I?" It was so awkward, in fact, that I started to cackle...in my house! If you had come home from church and saw my family, you would have mistaken this for the show, "In the House." Various.DESCRPTION (Adapted from the application):The mechanisms of induction and regulation of the cyclooxygenases (COX-1 and -2) have been the subject of recent studies. These studies have elucidated some of the structural features of the enzymes and have led to the discovery of some of the mechanisms of their regulation. All three isozymes of the COX-1 enzyme are expressed in bone marrow. A specific inhibitor of COX-2, nimesulide, is very effective in treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. Using the technique of liquid chromatography coupled with mass spectrometry (LC/MS), the investigators have analyzed the presence of COX-1 and COX-2 in human umbilical vein endothelial cells (HUVEC). They have detected COX-1 and COX-2 in these cells and their expression levels were modulated by cytokines and growth factors. Expression of COX-2 in endothelial cells appears to be regulated by growth factors, whereas expression of COX-1 is regulated by tumor necrosis factor-alpha

(TNF).Kansas Association for the Advancement of Colored People v. Wilson Kansas Association for the Advancement of Colored People v. Wilson, 345 U.S. 940 (1953), was a United States Supreme Court case in which the Court held that states can adopt a remedy against school segregation that is less stringent than the strict scrutiny standard of the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and that it is not unconstitutional per se for a local school board to adopt a school desegregation plan that does not apply to local public schools that are not under the direct control of the school board. f678ea9f9e
